

Communications Services for Companies and Communities

The purpose of our operations is lightening the workload of editorial staff in newspaper houses by offering reliable and versatile journalistic services.

We also wish to assist work communities and their members in developing themselves and performing in their work by offering work supervision, communications, author and work community training.

Our services:

Our press service produces articles from news to reportages and from columns to personal interviews both for newspapers and magazines.

Our communications and author training teaches the basics of clear written communications, how to compile a bulletin and arrange a press conference as well as the basics of cooperation with newspaper houses and journalists.

Our editing service will edit even the most awkward and difficult text into an easy-to-read form that will lure readers.

Our work supervision and work community development services will assist your work community and its members in reviewing and improving their operations as well as in promoting their readiness to respond to the challenges posed by working life.
